The Reverend William M. Latta, vicar of St. Anne's Episcopal Church in Appomattox and two other churches in the Appomattox-Buckingham Cure, has announced his retirement from the active ministry and a move to North Carolina.

Mr. Latta, who became priest in-charge of the Cure on September 1, 1967, plans to move to Wilmington, N. C., (actually Wrightsville Beach) June 20, where he and Mrs. Latta already have a home on Banks Channel.

During his stay in Appomattox, Mr. Latta has been serving the local church plus Emmanuel Church, Glenmore and Grace Church, Manteo.

He previously served as executive secretary of the Dept. of Missions of the Diocese of North Carolina and as rector of St. Andrew's Church, Durham, N. C.

One project which will follow his move to N. C. will be a course of study at the Genological School, National Archives in Washington, where the Latta's son-in-law, Edward Hill is employed. Mr. Latta says geneological research is an interest of his and he look forward to pursuing it further.

While in Washington he says he will also enjoy visiting his daughter, Elizabeth and his grandson, Bruce, two years old. The Latta's son, William A, Jr. and his wife, of Burlington North Carolina have a son and a daughter, making three grandchildren in all.

The Lattas like the out-of-doors. Mr. Latta says he has enjoyed the Country Club golf course and at the Latta home on the Channel, they can shove their sail boat right out into the water. Says the vicar, "Nothing can beat sail boating, no fuel and no fumes."

The Lattas have made many friends during their stay in Appomattox, and many good wishes follow them in their move south to new responsibilities and new opportunities for relaxation during retirement years.
